

Richard Hax

A book about the hatred of the Gods, Anarchism and the current existential crisis in America.

Is America Dying? Our economy is doing well according to experts but the morale of the nation is decaying.
More importantly the main religion of the States is currently under scrutiny.

33%

THE MISOTHEIST MANIFESTO

Part Two

Who calls the shots? “Well, it’s ok to be a slave” the masochist says. If so, then pain is a completely subjective experience. Then take Guantanamo Bay for example, are those prisoners enjoying themselves? Really masochism from the conspiratorial perspective (MK-Ultra, Mind-Control Programming, etc.) is dissociation from pain and pleasure, so that the subject will accept everything. And I mean anything. Fritz Springmeier discussed this in his books. A wise person once said, if you can’t convince them, confuse them. Maybe that’s why indoctrination is practiced by our government.

Indoctrination is the opposite of education. It is easier to be sly as a fox and tell a person lies, and eventually reveal the truth to them in a vulnerable position. If you tell the person the truth, they run away like a rabbit. Fox and Rabbit.

Lying is a regular function of the Government. Transparency would require an masochist because no one will reasonably accept getting fucked. Simple. Nothing terribly complex about that. If there’s one we could learn from the Serbs and Russians, it is the ‘suka’. Yugoslavia. Notice the slav, or slave. As a nice Wiki article states: “The English word slave comes from Old French sclave, from the Medieval Latin sclavus, from the Byzantine Greek σ κ λ ᾱ β ο ς, which, in turn, comes from the ethnonym Slav, because in some early mediaeval wars many Slavs were captured and enslaved. An older theory connected it to the Greek verb skyleúo 'to strip a slain enemy.’”

A nation of slaves. Speaking of which, the orthodox brotherhood and religion are more examples. If the Christians are true and Satan is the Father of lies, then that’s another example. Slavery is OK in religion. In spirituality, it is justified because of omnipotent deities. Why is there an exception? So it’s ok to be a slave to Diana but not a mere man? Diana cannot even prove her own existence, so it limits the amount of power or better yet controls she has.

People have abandoned Diana so that furthers limit the control. Furthermore, secularism is taking over, but our Governments are being worshipped as Gods themselves. Authority is another God or power. And most certainly we are slaves to that authority. To spit on that authority and better yet, annihilating that authority is one of those simple and difficult solutions. Making it incredibly difficult in our hedonistic, materialistic society where everyone is complacent. But the Enlightenment must be destroyed, and futurism shall replace it. A more postmodern take on the world. The Enlightenment has failed anyway, look at the state of the world.

So it's time to change things. But as I said under Occam's Razor, the solution is simple. There shouldn't be a complicated solution to these problems. And no half measures. Enter action with boldness. Transcend the current power structure. Challenge the status quo. For those whistleblowers and potential whistleblowers out there, don't wait to send out the information. Edward Snowden had revealed a lot about the U.S Government and all governments abroad through the NSA leaks.

The National Security Administration is a perfect illustration of my concept of power vs. control. Think about it. Say what you want, but if you have blackmail then you could control that person. How do you obtain that kind of information?

Through data-mining and close surveillance. Now not only you have made that person under your control but you also have power over them.

Dominance. You could make them do things that they normally wouldn't do. That's control. Power is simply exercising your strength but control is establishing it. Now you know you're fucked and enslaved. Total control is a goal of the totalitarian. Total power is the goal of the authoritarian. The elites have power over the world but then do not yet control the world.

Is that what the New World Order is about? Full control over the people? The police have power over you but do they control you? Can they command you to perform a blowjob and you are compelled to do it? No. Not yet, anyway. Now that is control. Manipulation and indoctrination. That's how you know who is a slave. Ask one-hundred people to get up because of an emergency when there is none is power, exercising strength upon your fooled victim.

But command one-hundred people to stand at your will for no reason and that is control. They obey your every command. They don't need a reason or a logical conclusion to do what you tell them to do. They don't ask questions. They don't even want the answers, they just want you to tell them what to do. Total control. Mind control. Why not call it 'mind power'? Well, the MSM has power over your mind and so does the propaganda they put out. But it's the control they're actually looking for.

Will they get it? Well, silence is consent. And Most Americans are not complaining, so maybe they like their servitude. It's an interesting topic. All of the subliminal messaging, the psychological warfare, the programming. It's all suicide. You drink, eat, fuck, consume and spend like Tony stated in Scarface. And yet the end comes and boy, it's a slow trainwreck.

Don't get me started on the religious and superstitious, as an antitheist, I can somewhat understand someone's delusion to believe in a God, but I cannot respect it. I have spoken on this very topic before on the positive aspects of religion, but I still haven't found one good reason to even consider spirituality. There is no reason to worship a God, other than fear or to satisfy your selfish, hedonistic desires. A perfect example of that is Satanism and the fear aspect is Christianity.

This is rather the position of Christopher Hitchens of his accusation of all religion being dogmatic and anti-liberty. If you think about it religion is collectivist and in some cases anti-individualist. This is why usually abuse is the sister of all spirituality and as we have seen with Waco, TX and the Jim Jones tragedy, it is the enemy of humanity. If you value a God more than your fellow man, then you are a piece of shit. Shiva, Allah, Apollo and all of these other deities are not more valuable than humanity.

And because of this, I can boldly declare that the worship of the Gods will lead to the end of humanity. It is anti-human. A revolting lifestyle really. Chopping off the heads of children in Mexico City as a blood sacrifice to some ancient pagan deity on the pyramids is most certainly anti-human. Human sacrifice is anti-human. In the religious sense of course. Trust me, there are exceptions. But not for a sky daddy. Besides it is not worth it. Ultimately speaking, we will all fail. Even under the 'Gods' help. Ancient Rome and eventually we will too. They never thought that they would've fallen, but our country has a spirit of dread and doom, which is somewhat different from Rome's decadent expressions.

Most of us know that this can't last forever but it doesn't stop some people to still become decadent. Though it may seem like I am rubbing it in the faces of the spiritual and religious people but I am making a true statement towards the community out of sincerity. Where's your God? He most certainly isn't present while all of this incredible amounts of suffering is occurring all across the world.

Similar to a Hitchen's quote, if Jesus cured a blind man, then why not cure blindness? Why must we suffer in this nihilistic, empty and vain world? Most importantly why do the wicked not suffer? I understand, the corrupt and evil rule the world according to the Holy Scripture, you might say. But I am convinced that God must be malevolent to even allow that to exist! God has wiped out the earth according to Bible many times.

Why stop there? It's been 2,000 years of mortals doing what thou wilt and I guess Jesus has abandoned the idea of returning the second time. It seems like us humans will destroy ourselves before Jesus even makes an appearance. That is, if he even exists at all. But let's keep an open mind and entertain the idea of such a deity existing. Why would there even need to be a debate regarding his existence?

Wouldn't it be profoundly clear? Not even your average pastor can provide evidence other than threats of Hell. Another way of tracking this is Hollywood Babylon. But that's another topic for another time. We see the world in a state of practically chaos. Yemen getting invaded by Saudi Arabia, the trade war between China and the US, Russia annexing Crimea from Ukraine, Greece facing an economic crisis.

It is all falling down. And when it falls down, who are you going to call now? Some argue that the end is not coming however, there was never an 'when' to our end but rather an 'if'. We know it will happen but it is uncertain as to when. And when it happens, nobody will ever see it coming. That's the real scary part. So prepare while you can until it does.

